The Police Station

Newport Pagnell

Newport Pagnell Police Station c1910

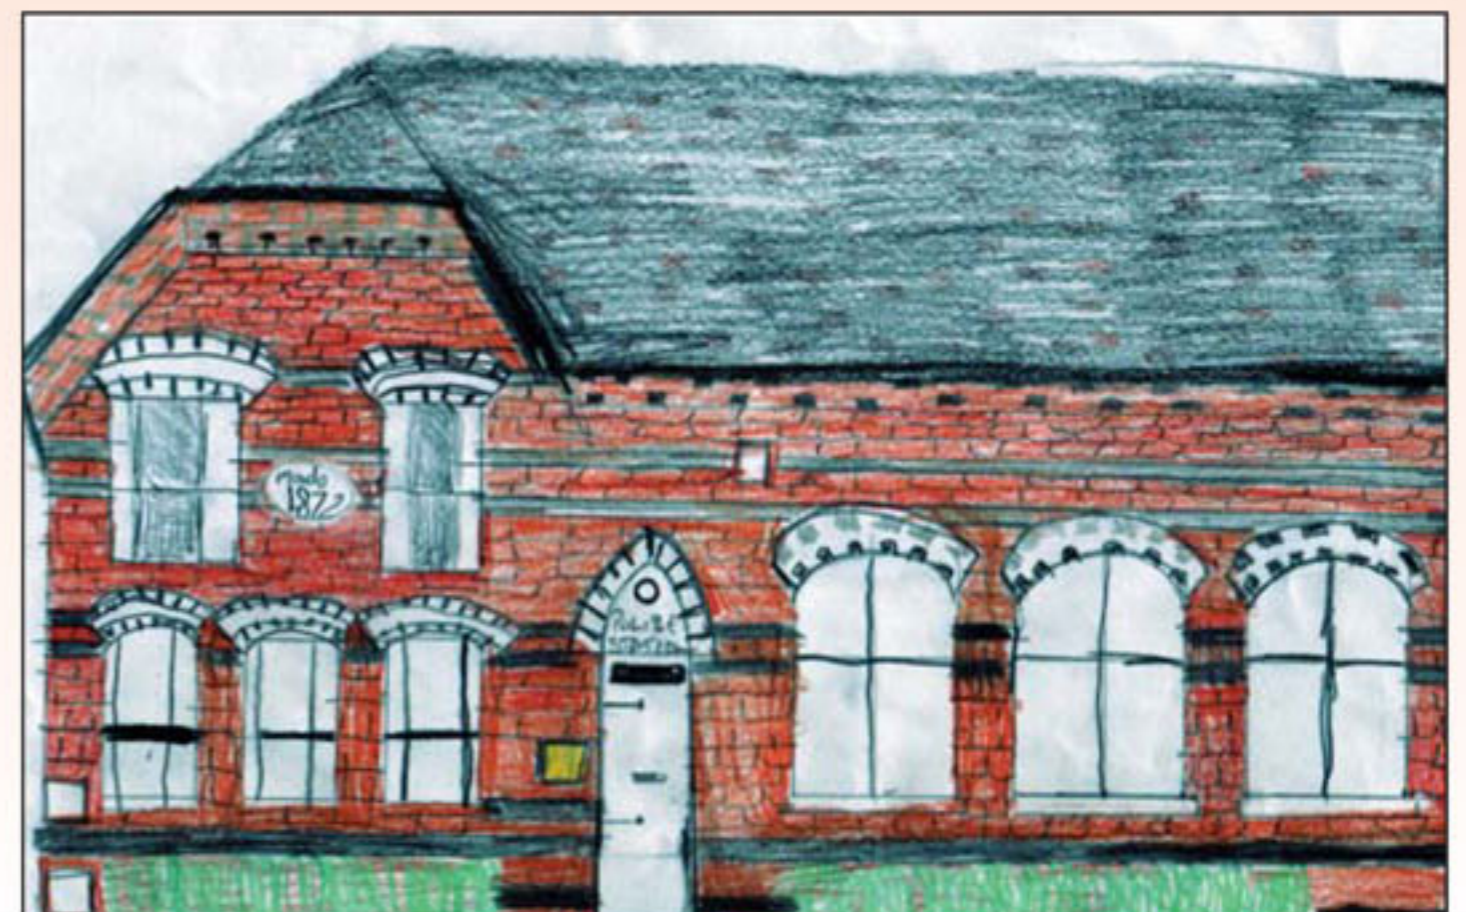

Newport Pagnell Police Station was built in 1872 and it cost £1,400. There were four Policemen in Newport Pagnell and one Inspector who lived in the Police house. The Inspector grew vegetables for his family in the garden. The garden has been converted into a car park.

When the Police Station was built, there was a wall circling it. Most of the wall was knocked down so that cars can go in although there is still some left at the front.

There are four cells. In the doors there are spy holes for the Police to see through. If you needed to go to the toilet there was a bucket for you to go in (YUK!). One of the cells was for women.

Nowadays the cells are used for storage of stolen goods.

There was a Magistrates Court next to the cells to see if you were innocent or guilty.
